Day 1

Thursday 7th October

Most of the participants had afternoon arrivals, and with no delays and bags secured we headed towards our comfortable Lima overnight hotel. Earlier one of the participants had birded along the Malecón and managed nice views of Peruvian Booby, Peruvian Pelican, and a gaudy group of Inca Terns, together with nice common garden birds of the capital such as Eared Dove, West Peruvian Dove, and a sooty morph of Vermillion Flycatcher. In the evening we all met over a nice selection of pastries and other Argentinean-style dishes and we discussed the promising itinerary we had ahead of us.

Day 2

Friday 8th October

This morning we had our transfer to begin the first part of the journey, and we were very enthusiastic about the beginning of the Amazonian experience. We had a nice flight over the mighty Andes and once in Iquitos we met with Muyuna Lodge staff, and were taken across this once rubber capital of the country. At the offices we were informed that rain hadn't been as pronounced as it should and for that reason we had to be transported to the port of Nanay where we boarded our vessel and accessed the mighty Amazon. For the next 3 hrs we had a delightful trip, birding from the boat, and saw some of the typical Amazonian river edge species, including Cocoli Heron, Great and Snowy Egret, Yellow-headed and Black Caracara, Osprey, Large-billed and Yellow-billed Tern. Once in the Yanayacu Creek we walked around the very shallow mouth, and our birding produced a nice set of psittacids: Cobalt-winged, Dusky-headed and White-eyed Parakeets, and scope views of the scarce Tui Parakeet, as well as Yellow-crowned and Mealy Parrot. As we headed towards the lodge we found Blue and Ruddy Ground Doves, Smooth-billed Ani, Fork-tailed Palm Swift, Rufescent Tiger Heron, four species of Kingfishers, Bluish-fronted Jacamar, Scarlet-crowned Barbet, and Chestnut-eared Aracari, among others.

Days 3-5

Saturday 9th - Monday 11th October

Over the course of the next few days at Muyuna we managed to explore the different habitats that are easy to access during this time of the year (given that the water level is low access to those is therefore easier), including the way into varzea (seasonally flooded rainforest), oxbow lakes, river islands, terra firme, swamps, etc. Luckily we had very pleasant weather and saw a good array of typical as well as some of the more special Amazonian birds including White-throated Toucan, Black-fronted Nunbird, Plain-breasted Piculet, Yellow-throated and Cream-coloured Woodpecker, Red-bellied and Blue-and-yellow Macaws, many colourful tanagers (the favourite of all being Paradise), many Black-collared and Slate-coloured Hawks, Amazonian White tailed Trogon, Lemon-throated Barbet, Blue cheek and White eared Jacamars, and many of the new world flycatchers.

Pale-legged Hornero and the gaudy and fast Red and White Spinetail showed well, and we also saw Long-billed and Cinnamon-throated Woodcreepers, Amazonian and Barred Antshrikes, Amazonian Streak and White-flanked Antwrens. And amongst the difficult antbirds we managed to see the special Black tailed Antbird (best views ever!), Warbling, Plumbeous, White shouldered and Band tailed, and even an elusive Black-spotted Bare-eye allowed good views. The Cotingas didn't disappoint us either and we were very pleased with Bare-necked Fruit Crow (an odd feathered creature), Plum-throated Cotinga, Purple-throated Fruit Crow and the one we were all hoping for - Amazonian Umbrellabird - a male that flew across a swampy area with lots of flowering Amazonian Giant Water Lilies.

The astonishing male Wire tailed Manakin had us all excited, and the trio of fighting Amazonian Royal Flycatchers produced a similar feeling. Varzea Schiffornis and the always cryptic Rufous-browed Peppershrike allowed close up views. The night birds were not vocally active but despite this we managed Great and Common Potoos, Ferruginous Pygmy Owl and Pauraque.

All in all, we had a very productive first part of the trip. After our return to Iquitos we got checked-in at our hotel and took a nice walk along the "malecón" for our last minutes of the afternoon, observing and learning from the livelihoods of the locals.

Day 6

Tuesday 12th October

Today we had the usual early start and pick-up by local guide and driver, and a great full day to explore one of the most fascinating and enigmatic of Amazonian habitats; the "white sand forest" of Allpahuayo Mishana reserve. A good start came with big flocks of Maroon-tailed and White-winged Parakeets as we were finishing our breakfast. Once on the trails we first found a fast and elusive group of birds that we worked patiently and as the frenzy stopped, we had Mouse-coloured Antshrike, Plain brown Woodcreeper, Northern Chestnut-tailed Antbird, Pearly Antshrike, Ancient Antwren, Yellow-browed Antbird, and the most elusive one; the Allpahuayo Antbird.

Diversity is always greatly welcome, but the poor soils at this site make bird densities particularly low, and as a result it is quality and not quantity that was our target! Today our specials included; King Vulture, Bat Falcon, Amazonian Swift, Brown-banded and Swallow-wing Puffbirds, Black-bellied Cuckoo, Pompadour Cotinga, Broad-billed Motmot, Yellow-billed Nunbird, Amazonian Violaceous Trogon, Orange-crested and White-crowned Manakin, Saffron-crested Tyrant-Manakin, the discrete Paradise Jacamar, Opal-crowned, Magpie and Paradise Tanagers, Blue Dacnis and both Short-billed and Purple Honeycreepers. Just as the day got hot and bird activity quieted down, we had time to refresh in the hotel and soon after we were transferred to Iquitos Airport for our short domestic flight to Tarapoto, our next destination.

Wednesday 13th October

Today we changed habitats; first we visited Juan Guerra (where we found road works! and consequently decided to bird two side tracks), and in the mid morning we went to quebrada Upaquiua. These sites are conveniently located, and here one is met with a very different type of Amazonian forest, a rather distinctive sort of dry habitat that is under the influence of the Huallaga drainage. With little effort we found the Huallaga race of Western Slaty Antshrike (Huallaga Antshrike), and Bluish-fronted Jacamar behaved obligingly as predicted here, together with a well worked pair of White-browed Antbirds.

Further on we found a nice soaring Hook-billed Kite, and attracted a nice set of birds including a Ferruginous Pygmy Owl together with mobbing Mouse-coloured and Yellow-crowned Tyrannulets, Stripe-chested Antwren, Buff-breasted Wren, Pearly-vented Tody Tyrant, Yellow-breasted Flycatcher, Tropical Gnatcatcher, and a White-winged Becard. Along the river we could spot White-banded Swallows, Grayish Saltator, Inca and Violaceous Jays, Red-capped Cardinal, Straight-billed Woodcreeper, Rufous Casiornis, Mishana Tyrannulet and Speckled Chachalaca. Further ahead and along the quebrada we had good looks at Rufous-winged Antwren, Sulphur-bellied Tyrant-Manakin, Scaled Pigeon, Small-billed Elaenia, Blue-headed Parrot and Bright-rumped Attila. It was time to get back to the lodge but first we stopped for a Rufous-fronted Thornbird (which builds a colossal nest for its size) and a nice group of sunning Comb Ducks on the banks of the Huallaga itself.

After a nice lunch we had our check-out and promptly headed for Cerro La Escalera protected forest. As the afternoon showed bright and sunny and with only a few birds moving about, we decided to stop at a lower location, and what a wise choice this was, just as we got out of the vehicle we noticed a fruiting melastome tree that had a very bright and smart set of birds including; Silver-beaked, Masked, Bay-headed, Yellow-backed, Fulvous-headed, White-lined, Grey-headed and an obliging pair of the extremely localized Dotted Tanagers. At the same tree also came Blue-crowned Manakin, Black-faced Dacnis, Gilded Barbet, Purple-throated Euphonia and Green Honeycreeper! The skies had nice flocks of White-tipped, Chestnut and White collared Swifts and at the higher grounds we found the habitual Cliff Flycatcher and a Golden-tailed Sapphire. After having reached the top we found a hummingbird that simply put wouldn't fit anything that we could expect at this site, we observed it in two feeding bouts and as of now remains a mystery, perhaps a new taxon or a species not previously recorded for Perú?. As the sun went down we went to our next lodge, at Puerto Mirador in Moyobamba where we enjoyed a nice meal and a good night of sleep.

Day 8

Thursday 14th October

We started another good day with pre-breakfast birding around the grounds. While still dark we could hear Tropical Screech Owl. Here we had to look hard to find a Pale-breasted Thrush (local in Peru, much commoner in south-eastern South America), Turquoise and Huallaga Tanager (also known as Black-bellied), and some others as Rufous-fronted Thornbird, Blue-winged Parrotlets, Streaked Flycatcher, Squirrel Cuckoo, and Yellow-browed Sparrow, were happily moving about.

As the day progressed we birded the nearby Quebrada Mishkiyaquillo where hummingbird feeders had been put out and we easily had Great-billed and Black-throated Hermits, Grey-breasted Sabrewing, White-necked Jacobin, Fork-tailed Woodnymph and the ubiquitous Glittering-throated Emerald. Some nice and colourful tanagers were found ahead feeding in trees, among these Paradise, Green and gold, Bay-headed, Spotted, Yellow-bellied and Golden. A nice Long-tailed Tyrant did his well coordinated fly-catching, meanwhile others observed Bluish-fronted Jacamar, also fly-catching!, and a canopy flock brought us Lafresnays Piculet, Slaty-capped Flycatcher, Red-eyed and Yellow-green Vireos, Olivaceous Woodcreeper and a tiny Scarlet-breasted Fruiteater.

We found ourselves enjoying lunch in Yacumama, a savanna and swamps mixture of habitats. It was quite warm and after securing Point-tailed Palmcreeper we started our ascent into the eastern Andes. By the Aguas Verdes River, a mighty one in the foothills, we had very good luck and spotted a family of Torrent Ducks. Soon a White-capped Dipper was called out, and as it started to rain and we were deciding on what to do when a Red-ruffed Fruit Crow flew across the road in front of us!

We decided to try for the Royal Sunangel, and with little effort we had it perched very close, and soon our attention was on a very obliging Yellow-throated Tanager, and before scampering out of the rain we had a nice Rufous-tailed Tyrant on the rock face across the road. As we approached the famous Abra Patricia Pass we decided to head to the Owllet Lodge and watch a nice set of hummingbirds (Speckled Hummingbird, Fawn-breasted Brilliant, Collared and Bronzy Incas, Chestnut-breasted Coronet, Emerald-bellied Puffleg, Long-tailed Sylph and the minute White-bellied Woodstar) as the day finished.

Friday 15th October

In the morning, actually while it was still dark, we tried for White-throated Screech Owl but apparently a Rufous-banded Owl that came by sent it away...at the end we managed a nice look of Rufous-bellied Nighthawk while soaring overhead and an early starting Sickle-winged Guan performing with its mechanical sounds. Pre-breakfast birding put on a nice show of colourful birds including Saffron-crowned, Blue and Black, Metallic green, Beryl spangled, and Silver back Tanagers, and as just we headed to eat, a skulking Bar-winged Wood Wren attracted us, and as a bonus a pair of Golden-headed Quetzals were perched in a small tree watching us!

After some nicely welcome warm food we were ready for the trails, and on the way we picked up Black-throated Tody Tyrant, and a nice pair of Lulu's (Johnson's) Tody Tyrant. Once inside we could hear Chestnut and Rufous Antpittas but they weren't giving themselves up, and by the end we had better luck with Variable Antshrike, Pearled Treerunner, Green and black Fruiteater, Strong-billed Woodcreeper, Cinnamon Flycatcher, Yellow-billed Cacique, Russet-crowned Warbler and an unexpected Ochraceous-breasted Flycatcher.

After a full on morning of birding, we had a well deserved lunch and the afternoon was decided to be spend in the area around Afluentes. Later we reached lower elevations and found a different set of nice birds including the fabulous Cock-of-the-Rock, Swallow tailed and Double tooth Kites', Ruddy Pigeon, Many spotted Hummingbird, Many banded Aracari, Black mandibled Toucan, Speckled-chested Piculet, Lineated Woodpecker, White fronted Tyrannulet, Masked Tityra, Crested and Russet back Oropendola, and a fast male Cerulean Warbler.

The day had been a success so far but the very best was yet to come! While having dinner one of the rangers informed us that a new trail had been producing the mythical Long-whiskered Owllet, so some of the group just couldn't resist the enticement and soon were on the trail again. After 40 or so minutes we were delighting ourselves with this extremely little known creature, and we even managed to video it. The bird remained motionless for almost two minutes! What a treat! And...on our return a stake out of Andean Potoo paid off as well!

Saturday 16th October

Today was certainly a big day, provided that we made a careful effort to find one of the most spectacular hummingbirds of the Americas, the aptly name Marvellous Spatuletail. After a short session of pre breakfast birding, we headed to the Interpretative Center of the Marvellous Spatuletail. Once on the site we were greeted with the fine news that several full adult males were showing sporadically around a patch of hummingbird feeders by a dry quebrada. After enjoying Andean Emerald, Sparkling Violetear, Violet-fronted Brilliant, White-bellied and Purple-collared Woodstars, and White-bellied Hummingbird, we soon were astonished by the splendour of the Marvellous Spatuletail - surely one of the most magnificent species of all hummingbirds.

After lunch and having settled into our comfortable and nearby hotel we did a little extra birding in upper Abra Patricia, and on the way we had to stop because a loud family group of White-capped Tanagers was by the side of the road. At the pass, the birding yielded Band-tailed Pigeon, Scaly-naped Amazon, Rufous Spinetail, Pale-footed Swallow, Citrine Warbler, Cloud-forest Brush Finch, Spectacled Whitestar, Blue-capped Tanager, Lacrimose and Hooded Mountain-Tanagers, and Barred Becard. We then drove to our nearby hotel and after a good meal rested for the night.

Day 11

Sunday 17th October

This day was full of activity as we birded many sites en route towards the very impressive archaeological sites of our program. Our first stop was at the nearby lake of Pomacochas where we enjoyed good looks of Plumbeous Rail, White-cheeked Pintail, Masked Duck, Common Morhen, Andean Coot, Andean Lapwing, Pectoral Sandpiper, and a few other more common species. Our next stop was at the turn off to Chido Trail where on a swift stop we had Red-crested Cotinga, Black-chested Buzzard Eagle and Mountain Caracara. We then descended to the Utcubamba watershed and given that the valley is parallel to the Marañon River, a fairly good number of the middle Marañon endemics were on our scope for the day. With a well-appointed stop we found a group of Peruvian (Marañon) Pigeons, several Marañon Streak Saltators, a skulking pair of Marañon Wrens, and many Marañon Thrushes. We also enjoyed more widespread species such as Scarlet-fronted Parakeets in big and loud overflying flocks.

The pre-Incan Chachapoyan's lived in the surroundings of this valley and worked intensively in building the Kuelap Fortress - this impressive archaeological site was our cultural target for the day. Once we accessed the middle Utcubamba we started found a confiding Fasciated Tiger Heron fishing in the torrent. On the way to Kuelap we stopped to enjoy lunch and found a beautiful Rainbow Starfrontlet. At the site itself we enjoyed the extraordinary ruins (considered by archaeologists equally as majestic as the famous Machu Picchu), and did a little more birding adding Tufted Tit Tyrant, Streaked Tuftedcheek and the distinct grey-morph of Superciliated Hemispingus. Later in the afternoon we headed down to the pleasant country side accommodation we had for the night, El Chillo.

Monday 18th October

We had the good fortune to wake up in the nice surroundings and gardens of R. Chillo bordering the Utcubamba River, and we were delighted with such birds as Blue Ground and White tipped Dove, an unexpected flushed Lesser Nighthawk, Chestnut-collared Swift, the endemic Black-necked Woodpecker, and other regional endemics such as Spot-throated Hummingbird, Buff-bellied Tanager, Marañon Thrush and Gnatcatcher, and more widespread gaudy ones like Vermilion Flycatcher, Chestnut-crowned Antpitta, Blue and Yellow Tanager, and the yet unresolved Line-cheeked/Barons' Spinetail. Before getting ready to pack everything, we went and spotted two individuals of the Peruvian endemic and little known Koepecke's Screech Owl.

We arrived at Jaén, had a relaxed check-in, and then lunch. The afternoon was rainy and we had planned to bird in the outskirts but decided to head further and tried Tamborapa. We found and birded around a nice forested roadside, with good birds such as Scarlet-fronted Parakeet, Andean Emerald (unexpected here!), Scarlet-backed Woodpecker, Marañon Spinetail and Crescentchest, Mouse-coloured Tyrannulet, Tawny-crowned Pygmy Tyrant, Brown-crested Flycatcher (a very localized bird in Perú), Inca Jay, Rufous-browed Peppershrike (taxonomy still pending on this taxon), Purple-throated Euphonia, Red-crested Finch and Golden bellied Grosbeak.

Tuesday 19th October

We started with unexpected rain and that spoiled our plan to visit Gotas de Agua, instead we birded rice fields in the outskirts of town and found lots of Great and Snowy Egrets, Striated Heron, and after walking the fields we managed to flush two nice rallids; Grey-breasted Crake and a juvenile Spotted Rail. Along the hedges and trees in the area we located regional endemics like Ecuadorian Ground Dove, Pacific Parrotlet (in good numbers here) and a vocalizing Striped Cuckoo. The fields had the range of seed-eating birds; Blue black Grassquit, Yellow-bellied Seedeater, and Drab and Chestnut-throated Seedeater.

Later we went to Seminario but found the site highly degraded as it has been recently burned, so instead we ended up driving further and en route birded to find Long-billed Starthroat, Scrub Blackbird, White-lined and a single unexpected Silver-beaked Tanager, Yellow-tailed Oriole, and a cooperative Marañon Wren.

Back in the hotel and after having collected our bags we enjoyed lunch and then had a transfer afternoon drive with a single stop to bird at Porculla which provided good results; Hooded Siskin, the local endemic Bay-crowned Brush Finch, White-browed Chat Tyrant, Gray-chinned (Porculla) Hermit, Collared and Chapman's' Antshrikes, Chiguango Thrush, and the attractive Ash-breasted Sierra Finch. Later we arrived at Tucume in time for a nice welcoming dinner cooked in a cosy family ambience, before retiring to bed.

Wednesday 20th October

Today we started our birding right in the grounds of Tucume, a nice pre-breakfast stroll allowed nice sightings of the impressive pyramids and in the outskirts the dry forest provided access to some good Tumbesian endemics such as West Peruvian Dove, Baird's Flycatcher, White-faced Gnatcatcher (split from Tropical), Necklaced Spinetail, Tumbesian Tyrannulet (split from Mouse coloured), Croaking Ground Dove, Pacific Hornero, and Pacific Parrotlet as well as other more widespread but equally welcome gaudy birds like Cinereous Conebill, Golden Olive Woodpecker, and Burrowing Owl.

We then headed to Lambayeque and to the Tomb of the Lord of Sipán Museum. Once in this extraordinary museum we were delighted to learn about the Moche culture, another one of the many little known pre-Incan tribes that inhabited South America. We were extremely impressed by the high level of organization and the superior work in their ornaments.

Later we departed to Chaparrí, where we had a very pleasant lunch and arranged a time to meet for the afternoon activities. Chaparrí is always a beautiful peaceful place we all love to visit, its remoteness and comfortable arrangements together with its superb dry forest and quality tumbesian scrub makes this place a must. The afternoon walk worked well and soon we were watching the critically endangered White-winged Guan up close, the gaudy and noisy White-tailed Jay, and on the way we also found Scarlet-backed Woodpecker, Fasciated and the more cryptic Superciliated Wren, and while watching a Tumbes Sparrow we felt the presence of someone watching us - as we turned around there it was a Spectacled Bear!! ...but it turned upon seeing us staring at her and walked the other way. In the afternoon we recorded a rare species for the reserve; Lesser Swallow-tailed Swift, and while walking back we encountered Andean Tinamou, Peruvian Meadowlark, Elegant Crescentchest, and Short-tailed Woodstar, all of this while being followed by a White-collared Peccary!

Thursday 21st October

The beginning of the day was quite notable as the weather was unusual this time of the year, we had low fog and little of the usual hectic activity at the bathing hole in the nearby creek, most noteworthy being Amazilia Hummingbird and Purple-collared Woodstars. We then decided to bird the lower access road and found aptly named Croaking Ground Doves, Tumbes Hummingbird drinking sap from a tree trunk, Grey-and-white Tyrannulet, Tumbes Tyrant and Short-tailed Field Tyrant in the open in the desert-like scrub. As the day heated up we could add some nice raptors such as Red-backed (Variable), Harris's Hawk and a nicely patterned American Kestrel female. Lower down we were greeted with the compact flocks of some 50-80 of the local Sulphur-throated Finch and Parrot-billed Seedeaters two of the usual targets. On the way back we had the monotypic Cinereous Finch and were delighted by the cheerful singing of the White-edge Oriole.

After a nice coastal lunch we went out again and found other nice tumbesian birds such as Collared Warbling Finch, White-headed Brush Finch, Pacific Pygmy Owl, and while scanning nearby treetops we found a very rare bird for the reserve a female Little Woodstar, a relief for us as we haven't seen it in the previous days. Upon reaching the area of our previous bear sighting we approached slowly, soon our local guide pointed up in the nearby tree crown and to everyone delight the female Spectacled Bear was joyfully feeding on seedpods! After watching and photographing this magnificent animal for some time we resumed birding and managed some fine bonus birds such as Pacific Elaenia, Red-masked Parakeet, Andean Tinamou, Elegant Crescentchest, Guayaquil Woodpecker, and the variable Bran-coloured Flycatcher.

Friday 22nd October

Given our previous day's good results, we decided to head on early as we had a busy birding itinerary for the day. On the way we found numerous flocks of the highly restricted Sulphur-throated Finch and a soaring pair of Crested Caracara. At our first stop at the Tinajones reservoir we found good numbers of birds among these Pied-billed and Great Grebes, Cocoli Heron, Andean and Puna Ibis (the former being rare overall its range), White-cheeked Pintails, over wintering Blue-winged Teals and an unexpected Yellow-billed Pintail. At the waters edges were Black-necked Stilts and soaring were Savanna Hawk and Osprey, and on the nearby hillside we had great views of the regional endemic Peruvian Thick-knee. Our next stop was Pomac and after admiring a Prosopis tree we ventured into the dry forest and soon were admiring two beautiful endemics; Peruvian Plantcutter and Rufous Flycatcher.

Everything went well with the mornings birding and a nice stop to have sea food for lunch made it even better, it turned out to be a feast! We had the late afternoon to look for birds along the coast, and south of Pimentel we found quite a good variety of the typical Humboldt Current seabirds including Peruvian Pelican, Peruvian Booby, Magnificent Frigatebird, Grey-headed, Belchers, and Kelp Gulls, a combo of four plovers; Semipalmated, Grey, Kentish and the Killdeer, and perhaps best sighting of the afternoon was a Hudsonian Godwit that show well nearby a pond along with several exciting Cinnamon Teal.

We then returned to Chiclayo to do our check-in at the Hotel Grand Chiclayo, after refreshing we went out for a farewell dinner to celebrate the success of our birding journey with a feast and some local drinks.

Day 17

Saturday 23rd October

On the last day we had breakfast and then headed to the airport for our connecting flight to Lima. Once in Lima we had a couple of birding stops which added Guanay Cormorant, Blackish Oystercatcher, Pomarine and Parasitic Jaegers, Laughing Gull, and Sandwich and Royal Terns. After a nice lunch at the restaurant Rosa Nautica and having enjoyed courting Inca Terns in the window, we then drove to the airport to our connecting departures to Europe.

All in all we agreed on our excellent results, more than 500 species of birds recorded! (and with 5 additions to the list). Congratulations to all participants!
